

JAGER-SCHMIDT SAILS AWAY

CONFIDENT THAT HE'LL ROUND THE WORLD IN 40 DAYS.

And That the Lone Pair of Trousers He Took With Him Will Survive the Strain. May Have to Make the Last Lap of His Journey by Aeroplane.

Andre Jager-Schmidt, the French world gardener, after taking a view of the town from its tallest towers, boarded the White Star liner Olympic fifteen minutes before she sailed at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, assuring a throng of reporters and Frenchmen who saw him off that he would surely be in Paris on time even if he had to make the last lap of his journey from Cherbourg, where the Olympic will land him, by aeroplane.

Mr. Jager-Schmidt expressed some fear about the safety of his trousers, which he has sworn to wear until the completion of his trip. It is not impossible that the enthusiastic populace of Paris may decide to remove the trousers on the instalment plan to preserve as souvenirs.

These trousers, the newspaper man's friends said yesterday, are the only ones he has with him, and he has made a vow that he will wear no others until he reports at the office of his paper, the Excelsior, before midnight on August 26. The trousers were sent out yesterday to be pressed. The tailor did not know that they belonged to a man in a hurry and he did the pressing in so leisurely a fashion that Mr. Jager-Schmidt's friends became nervous, fearing that he would be unable to take in the town and a luncheon with them and then have time to catch the ship. A delegation was sent to the tailor to acquaint him with the nature of his job and the trousers came in a hurry. They were inspected carefully by the globe trotter to see that there had been no substitution, because he is proud of them and will, it was said by his friends, write a feuilleton for his paper entitled "How I Panted Round the World."

Capt. Smith of the Olympic sails for the first time over the short northerly course and he believes he will be at Cherbourg late on Friday night. This inspires Mr. Jager-Schmidt to believe that he may not have even to use an automobile to make the trip from Cherbourg to Paris in time to win the glory of having been the first person to go around the world in forty days. He says glory is all he will win, as he has made no bet, although he has no doubt many of his fellow Parisians have.

FOUR BOMBS AND ST. ROCO.

The Lawless Make Religious Festival the occasion for Loosening Explosives.

Another bomb explosion occurred early yesterday morning when the front of a butcher shop at 510 East Thirtieth street, owned by Antonio D'Allesandro, was blown in. The shop is on the ground floor of a double-decker six-story tenement containing sixty families, and the explosion, which shattered the shop windows, broke the iron stairs and caused a terrific hubbub. Everybody in the house was asleep when the bomb burst and the frightened inmates rushed pell-mell for the street, fearing another shock or a fire.

No one was injured. Not far away some of the late layers were still celebrating the feast of St. Rocco. There was the fourth explosion to occur during the three-day feast and the thorough element took advantage of the confusion to come boisterous. The police had to be called out to restore quiet.

D'Allesandro was questioned by the police, but denied that he had ever received any threatening letters. He is the owner of a second butcher shop at Twenty-seventh street and First avenue.

THE HOUSEHOLD SHOW.

Lanes Through the Scapegoats Now at Madison Square Garden.

The National Household Show, whereat the housekeeper takes her annual delight, opened last night in Madison Square Garden and was speedily thronged. The show will last a week. As usual, everything that is newest and slickest in the way of domestic utensils is on view, and usually on view in action. There are vacuum cleaners, rolling pins, saucepans, electric lamps, wireless apparatus, ironing boards, beds, chairs, tables, wall paper and dollies. And you can see electricity made to do all the work, or gas, or gravity. And there are apparently a thousand booths, at each one of which men and women are doing something new and astonishing.

TO CHILE TO MARRY.

Miss Seaton Takes a Long Trip to Meet Her Fiancee.

Miss Elizabeth M. Seaton, daughter of John Seaton, Superintendent of Buildings in the Borough of Richmond, sailed yesterday by the Royal Mail liner Trent for Colon to meet her fiancé, Edmund L. Hegeman, a civil engineer, in Iquique, Chile. She is to marry him there. They had planned to be married here, but Mr. Hegeman found that he could not get away and so he wrote to her to come to him. She will be nearly two weeks on the trip and on her arrival will be married at the American consulate. Later there will be a religious ceremony.

Miss Seaton was introduced on the Trent to C. E. Atwood, another civil engineer of Iquique, who had come here to marry and is taking his bride down with him, so she will not be so lonesome as she thought at first she might be. Mr. Hegeman has charge of the electrical railroad and the lighting construction work of Iquique.

Col. Williams Not to Resign.

A rumor that President Timothy S. Williams of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit would resign to become connected with the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway was denied yesterday by one of the directors of the company, who said that especially in view of the formation of the new company to operate the subway, President Williams's services would be needed. Mr. Williams was out of town.
